Might as well post some 10 month pictures...

I was asked on the laser forum to post some pictures for just a tad bit of encouragement, so I might as well as post them here, too!

There are no tricks. These are simply the best pictures I could take by myself, directly under the fluorescent lights of the bathroom, using the mirror to look at the viewscreen of my camera. Ill say it again... there aren't any lighting tricks, hair tricks, or anything! Even if you're tempted, don't play the 'well, but maybe his hair is pushed over and laying differently blah blah blah...¹ JUST DON'T DO IT.

Also, my hair is shorter right now.... it's shorter by probably close to an inch. We ALL AGREE that longer hair provides more "cover" and extremely short hair can look simply horrendous for "baldies". So, I'm at yet another disadvantage here. Don't be tempted to think that "well, maybe his hair is longer and just covering the scalp more blab blab hair..." DON'T DO THAT EITHER! lot...

Look, my hair is completely a different person's hair now. I hope you can CLEARLY see that. You can tell that it freaking SPRINGS OFF MY HEAD like it did when I was a little kid!

Also, keep in mind that I am directly under the most UNFORGIVING LIGHT KNOWN TO MAN:

[EDIT: I had to edit this post on August 16th, 2002 to change the location of the picture files since the unethical, malicious, infantile owners have ungraciously removed all links to my website. Under these lights, I am TRULY AT MY WORST! lol..

Notice that damn fat gray hair in that last one! Iol... Well, hey... what can I say. Stress does that. I'll pluck that out in a few minutes.

One other thing I have to say that you guys are just going to have to trust me on... my hair is actually really really dark brown now. Its the reflection of the light that's giving it the reddish, light brownish hue, UNLIKE BEFORE. It's extremely shiny now and very reflective. Before, my hair looked sorts reddish because it was super thin and DEAD LOOKING, and it didn't have any shine at all. Anyway, take that for what its worth!

These are completely unaltered except that I zoomed in on them. I might post the  $600 \times 800$  versions of the pictures right after this so you can get a better look.

Anyway, this is truly the best that my camera can show. I'm not a professional, nor do I have some sort of "official picture taker" because I'm just AN AMATEUR! Iol...

If you can't see the results, I'm sorry. If you 'can' see the results, know that if you can see ANYTHING in pictures, real life is much, much more profound. ...And these are profound in real life.

Thank you SO much or posting these. The difference is huge, and looks great. Your "light brown hair" color pre-treatment was essentially the same as mine, and like you, I have extra dark thick hairs that have formed as a result of LLLT. I cart with to see you at the year-mark!

OverMachoGrande Regrowth.com Membe		I really, really, really want you to see that my hair is completely different. It used to be DEAD, like a typical bald guy's hair. It's ALIVE NOW like a NON-BALDING GUY'S hair! Iol
Registered: Oct 2006		Yes, I still have those areas that just aren't going to fill in between my six-year-old transplant and now, but you know what? ROGAINE FOAM KILLED THOSE PLACES. Yes, I'll say it again those follicles are DEAL and I blame it on Rogaine Foam.
Posts: 6,638		Anyway, if I were to take pictures after my hair grows in a little, you people would be tempted not to believe them! Iol That's why I was so upset when I cut my hair two weeks ago because it looked so much fuller!
		So, finally, if you don't see the results or you don't think they are profound or you think that there is some as of trickery involved I can't help you anymore. I'm just an amateur, and that's the best I can do to show it. Now again, what anyone new starting flus should do jeedieds NDT being directly under a funcescent light is use a good video camera to really really get the depth and feel of the hair. I really think that's the only we to show the turn profunding of this.
		Ok, my dises are paid, and fin never posting pictures again unless the very, very small vellous hairs that just pecked out about two morths ago start doing anything cargy. But yes, those ern sinkt leat also posts, and they weren't there before. The popped out at about the eight month point, and I can barely see them but they are new and they are there. I don't count that as any sord of "results", but who knows maybe they will be one day. I can see that after eight months of healing, maybe those follicles can barely lik out an inkling of a hair now.

Regrowth.com Membe	ŗ	If I had started this five years ago, I would have had ZERO LOSS after my transplant. Had I had never triec Rogaine Foam, I wouldn't have quite so many "dead patches"! Had I had started this at 18 or 21???? I would have never had to post in a half loss forum!
Registered: Oct 2006 Posts: 6,638 Lignore J		Again, before I had thin, lifeless, dead, "balding man's hair", now I DONT! The hairs that I was able to save are completely vibrant now, as you can see by their vertical nature I lou I really think it's impossible for my temples to come back because I of hint the aggressive loss three killed the follibles, but who knows maybe II get Lucky. Those velous hairs are encouraging, but hey I can also just fill that in with a transpla and be DONE with all of the FOREVER.

Without a DOUBT my hair will look FULLER with longer hair, not less fulf, and that's why! I hated cutting my hair short in the first place, and why! sent people a bombardment of emails about how! needed a Flowbee. Much more scape is being exposed with it shorter like it is now than when it was longer. Guy I hoognilo and Jdp?10 nailed it.
Registered: Oct 2006 Posts: 6,638	Come on what's the FIRST THING people usually say when they are looking at "after" pictures?? "The hair is longer so it's covering more scalp"! Iol
1-gloom-1	See, you gays are turning this into another 'no win' type of thing when it's clearly a "win'! If I had hair that warn't shorter, you SAME PEOPLE instead would be looking for how my hair must be just covering my scalp more, without seeing what is truly right in front of your face.  Anyway, you peeps can asign all the "5%" or whatever amount you want (and it's way more than that, but I digress) —hart's finen and all, but what I want you guy to see is how my hair is completely different! The originals were "EEN MONTH'S AGO. That's almost a year ago! I have a feeling if most people NOT doing lasers took 10 month before and after pictures, you would have lost ground, not gained it and certainly not changed your hair texture to be more youthful, whant, and thicket!  This is a victory. Those baid patches have more-than-likely completely dead follicles and aren't coming back except with a transplant, and I new that already and I've been telling you guys that forever. But what I've experienced is a TOTAL VICTORY because I've stopped my hair loss. How? With lasers!You know, the thing that allegedy "CANT VIORIX" because there is 'no such phenomenon'! ILMAO.
	Anyway, I'm glad most of you can see it! _And I freaking HATE this thread with these pictures, which is why I haven't been responding much. I really hate seeing these pictures like this and I'm trying to avoid this thread, even if they do show clear regrowth and texture changel bit

	That's why I need a Flowhee. But anyway, I'm glad I facked up and out it this short because that's the only reason I took this set of pictures. Believe me., I don't EVER intend to have it this short or as short in the original pictures again! Any other pictures I take from now on will have MUCH LONGER HAIR!
	I probably wouldn't have posted any more if I didn't cut it this short because the outcry would have been "but your hair is longer so it's covering more of the scalp!"
	Anyway, I hope everyone "gets it" with the fact that this is 10 months time, so even if someone was using some product with some sort of "fake" benefit (like from a hair thickener or something) it would have shown a LOSS over that long of a time period, not the same or a gain!  Guys, seriously, I hate this thread so I might not post in it any more. I can't stand looking at myself like that!

I was about 20 bristles away from finishing the helmet, so I went to try it on and it has had this "conshead" shape that I thought would go down once it was on my head- the bristles werent even touching mead there. So being the compulsive person I am I try and make it fit by cuting it down the middle. Needees to say it is ruined now and I have to start from scratch. If I had a cat rid kick it.

OverMachoGrande Regrowth.com Member	JHarsh80  I've technically got like 10 cats with all the strays, so you can kick one of them!
Registered: Oct 2006 Posts: 6,638	BUT WAIT!! Before you do anything rash you flipped it inside out, right? And also, this is more important: you do remember that those diodes actually weigh a good bit, right? The cone actually works in your favor because it helps disperse the weight down to the sides more! I had a cone, too, but the diodes push it down, and it actually causes the dodes to probably be "lighter" (resisting gravily a bit).
[Ignore]	Also, I feel that it's "broken in' a little, too, now that I've used it a lot. I think I remember that in the very beginning maybe some of the top middle brush bristles were a taid bit off of the sculp, but they are NOT arymore!
	So, all of that means you are probably fine! Don't kick the cat unless you have to!  Whovian
	That's a damn good question, and I honestly don't have any idea at all. Ill probably get one sometime next year so I'll let you know. Dr. Marcho is in Charlotte, and that's many hours from here, and I want to go to the same guy-even for just a consultation. Registered: Sep 2008 Posts: 44	I mentioned earlier in this thread that I have experienced a natural "wounding" type effect. I'd like to get your thoughts on it.
[Ignore]	http://img222.imageshack.us/img222/533/woundingep1.jpg  That photograph is an extreme closeup of the affected area. The black block was provided in order to avoid turning anyone's storach, since it's still healing. Basically, I've been having to dig these bory cysts from my scaip for the past few years. They've been creeping toward the anse formerly known as my hairline. But you can clearly see that the hair over the old states (up and to the left of the blood), which were mangled beyond recognition as I prind those of Sharts out, has been somehow reveloped.
	It is this effect that leads me to believe that there's something to this wounding thing, and that it isn't necessarily vital to use any of the Follica chemicals. The only thing that ever touched that area was minoxidil.
	In any case, if I could figure it out, I would do it to my entire scalp, scar tissue be damed. There is some inflammation in that picture, but it's probably partially due to the fact that I needled last night. But then again, it could be chronic. This is the first time I've seen it that close-up.

Regrowth.com Member	Yeah, I see what you are talking about with that cabbage patch of revitalized hairl Wow that's interesting. There is "definitely" something to the wounding -that's obviously been proven in labs (and on your head)-but since you've had clear results with the "diggling" thing, I'm wondering in you case if you should be doing MORE damage. It seems like priying the cysto out would be doing more than needling.

The noteworthy thing about it, though, is that these cysts are relatively huge and seem to form around the affected folicie. For a diameter of a few millimeters, the skin is DESTROYED when I remove one. And yet, the places where they've heated is the thickest area of hair growth in my balding zone. That has to mean something. I am convinced that the cure lurks somewhere in my welrd little scalp. I appreciate you saying that about the vellus hairs--that is encouraging. To bring those back to life has been my great hope, and that's why I built my Laser Obama. I've been using it for about 3 weeks now. If it has half the effect on those vellus hairs as your treatments have had on your hair, I will be thrilled. The conce actually works in your favor beauses it helps disperse the weight down to the sides more! Had a cone, too, but the diodes push it down, and it actually causes the diodes to probably be "lighter" (resisting gravity a bit). Also, I feel that it's "broken in" a little, too, now that I've used it a lot. My cone wasn't in the to back though right over the crown and like you said the bristles weren't even touching my head. I think may way it's seamed. This time i used towels, took my time, and it looks a lot better. Good to know about the heaviness too. I didn't use as many bristles as it looks like you did. My holes aren't perfectly lined up so overall I have 1 bristle for every two holes in general. In some spots it's more, but I tried to space them about 1/2 inch apart. It seems like more than enough but I can always add more if I need to. I tried using a drill biw and the punch works much better. I kept geting paranoid that the hammering was goma pies off my neighbors - especially when I had to do it TWICE! Those 'bony cysts' creeping towards your hairline sound a lot like the eruptions I suffered. Good news is that once they were over is I started seeing regrowth.

Still hoping to get to the 4 year update. I'm inspired by the pictures and will try and post some. I don't have the same camera and my hair is past my shoulders now (compared to the short hair I had at the time of the first pictures), but I'll see what I can do.

	Yeah, man it's such an OBVIOUS thickening! It's crazy, and that's why I wish I had this five years ago because I would have kept my hair! Literally, my hair in the MPB zones hasn't been this thick since I was a kid.  I suspect that almost everyone would get results like that, too. That's what lasers do best they "fix" your hair and thicken it Ok, about Rogaine: you know, I should really write a blog about my experiences with Rogaine Foam because I am NOT ALONE. I think Lakers here also had the same experience. I really do think it KILLED my hair, and I will argue with anyone that tells me otherwise because I we had many, many years of experience with a multitude of products, so I know what minox does to my head.
	But look Rogaine "does" work for some people. So, if it works for you, stick with it! Here is the rule of thumb: If you've used it for at least a few months and your hair has gotten much thinner, is hornbly greasy, is in one giant shed cycle, and al-around looks works because of it. DUMP IT. If you are sitting there looking in the mirror saying "OK, well maybe NEXT MONTH is the month that this stiff will start working for me, and my hair will fill in and everything will look great", at will never happen, so drop it! You'll be stuck with hornble, greasy, thin hair, always hoping that one day that will change AND IT NEVER WILL IoL. I wish someone had said that to me years ago because it would have saved me a lot of trouble.
	I think with some of us, minox just reacts horibly with our hair. I honestly think that the reason is because it's too strong for us, and -even though I refuse to test this hypothesis - I think 2% would actually be much more effective. Actually, I think 2% would be much more effective.
	But like I said, hey it works GREAT with some people! If it works for you, fantastict Keep using it, and it could only be a good thing to use lasers, minox, and propects together if they are all effective on their own.  -O.M.G.

I do know from experience that longer hair does help to cover up better but only till it reaches a certain length – after which the longer hair dooks limp and less full. That's been my experience anyway. Which is why I get a haircut every six or seven mortes, LOL!
11/7/2008 10:26 AM
OverMachoGrande	I don't get how you some of you guys can possibly say that it's "hard to tell", but I'm not going to try to to
Regrowth.com Member	rount get now you some of you guys cair possibly say finat is had to ten job. Thirting going to by to to understand that! lol This is so obvious it's not even funny! It's styled EXACTLY the same way the hair is BEHAVING A DIFFERENT WAY. That's a big point that you need to understand!
Registered: Oct 2006 Posts: 6,638 Lignore	I even waited the exact same amount of time after the shower (1 hour), brushed it the same way, cut it with the same measurements (although it ended up slightly shorter because of my modified clipper thing). You guys do realize that it's only about 14 to 12 (no haborter, right)? It's not like it's 2 inches shorter or anything, it's reality close. And yeah, shorter hair hides LESS, so I'm way more exposed that I would be if it was longer.
	Plus, when it's longer -like even when it's twice as long as it is now- it STILL wants to stand up and be "alive like that! It's gravity defying which, yes, makes it a blich to neaten up sometimes, but that's sort of a problem that at [formerty] balding guy wants to have! An I light?!
	But yeah, you are right that if my hair was longer -or even the same length (which it probably is right now), it would look even more full up until it got about five inches long or so. My "flowbee goal" is to keep it at about 4 or 4 12 inches on top, because I think that will be the optimal length. And that's the great thing about the Flowbee I can do that!
	Anyway, y'all stop posting on this damn thread! lol I'm sick of it being bumped up because even though my hair looks much better (and radically different) than it used to, I still hate seeing those pictures!
	I'm glad most people can right away see the difference and say "DAY-UMNI", though. It's exactly how I've been saying it was for six months now. a radically thicker, more vibrant, much shirlier and younge looking, an a little regrowth, but definitely a complete fail to any further loss. People's jaw drop that know me and have seen the difference in person. —And I don't expect to lose any more at all being that my hair quality has reverted back to this pre-bailing state.
	MOST EVERY ONE OF YOU (the success rate is phenomenal) can have this same experience, you know and for the life of a can't figure out wiy all you guys aren't approaching the one year mark like I am. I made it really obvious what I was doing and what my intentions were since June 2007 All you guys were observing and taking part in the same conversations and data/studies/proof that I was seeing and finding If not like It was a secret!
	How come I came up with a different decision to spring into action than you guye did?? I'm not any smarter or less sided than any other person in here, even though you guye are making me seem that way! GUYS THE EVIDENCE IS IN FROMT OF YOUR FACE. I'm at the point where I'm eagly leafing that i'you AREN'T using lasers like this, then you aren't really concerned with lighting for you hair. That's the "only" conclusion I can come up with you don't have the motivation to keep your hair like I of. That's the different
	That's fine if you are only somewhat concerned about it, but I'm not here for fun (well, ok, I am a little bit), I'n here so I don't have to lose any more hair and be like my grandfatherAnd now that isn't going to happen because I BEAT THIS.
	So, back to history, in December 2007 I finally put together my device and started using it, and only Jdp710 really sprung into action at the same time with a similar design. You know, Jdp710 the guy that ALSO had great results.
	I'm glad that a lot of you are starting to do it NOW, but come one NO ONE has really had great results unit this laser start, so of don't understand the hesitation or the relutzance to lumpr right on this where we first started figuring out the basics. I really don't. I would bet that most people even the people that THINK they have held ground since December 20
